

Archeological site of Castillon

The paintings of El Abrigo de El Castillón are in a small semicircular coat, with the entire pictorial ensemble located on its right side, except for a motif that is outside the coat, on the outer wall.

These are cave paintings framed within the schematic style, several groups of bars, differently arranged human figures and other indeterminate motifs can be identified. The predominant color would be red. Near here there was a fort located on the right bank of the River Esla.
