

Museum of the Collegiate of San Luis

The next three rooms and the gallery attempt to recreate the atmosphere of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries. Six canvasses with biblical themes from the sacristy are hung on the walls, all contained within a Baroque architectural framework. There are also various pictures from the Flemish school.

The Sala de los Fundadores, which is now a waiting room, includes two altarpieces belonging to the founders, Magdalena de Ulloa and Luis de Quijada. There is a tapestry displaying the coat of arms of the founders, and canvasses, some of which are from the Rubens school.

Buildings

Collegiate of San Luis: This church features a latin cross ground plan covered by a barrel vault with three chapels on each side of the nave. It was built by Gil de Hontañón, who used renaissance forms and showed a clear taste for the classic (lintel doors and windows). The main altarpiece was designed by Juan de Herrera and built by the master Juan Sanz de Torrecilla in 1579. The first body is made of stone from the quarries of Urueña and the relieves of the second body show motifs related with the Passion of Christ. The upper body is taken up by a sculpture of Saint Louis, the king of France. The presbytery, located next to the Epistle, contains the mortal remains of Magdalena de Ulloa.
