

Museum of the Commerce and Industry of Salamanca

The visitor will know the most important industries in the province of Salamanca and the guilds and craftsmen who were settling in the city. In addition, it houses underground deposits until where the water came at the end of the XIX century through a supply system capable to carry it to the town of Salamanca.

It has an exhibition called "The Sounds of Yesterday", which houses 400 old radio receivers, from the old galenas to the appearance of the transistor. They have been donated by Agustín de Castro from Salamanca and exhibited chronologically to observe their technical and aesthetic evolution.
