

Hermitage of Santa Maria Gomez de Roman / la Lugareja

13th-century temple more characteristic of the mudejar style of the tierra de Arévalo.

It has three apses with tall blocked up arcades, a dome and a tambour inside the large 12th-century lantern over crossing tower. They are the remains of a medieval monastery and only the triple wall and the transept arm are still standing. The remains are reminiscent of the late Romanesque and early Gothic style of the capitals and the style of the roofs and ornamentation.
