

Church of San Polo

In ruins, this mudéjar-romanesque brick church represents an exception, since most of the churches in the area were built with the typical Salamanca stone.

It had three naves with triple chevet being the central semicircular and wider than the laterals. From the ancient period, are preserved important remains in the south wall with blind arches and a portal, with lancet arch and archivolts of cyma-reversa. His remains are currently part of the facilities of the Hotel San Polo.
