Church of San Juan Bautista

Romanesque building of the XII century, built in masonry, reinforced at corners and singular elements with ashlar. Of simple ground plan, it has a nave and header with straight section finished in semicircular apse at the bottom, and the main chapel has a sober appearance, while in the centre has a Romanesque window with a semcircular arch, loophole type, and a series of corbels that are holding eave with simple balls which are decorated with plants.
