House of the Torre

This Casa de la Torre involves once more adding more historical richness to the Mena Valley, a place where the strengths reign and a historical landscape is drawn.

If we reach Sopeñano, a town that became part of this entailed estate founded by Diego López Vallejo in 1944, this ‘Casa de la Torre’ stands out in the neighborhood of Santolís , to which is accessed through a beautiful arch lowered .

A place that highlights for still keeping what is the typical architecture of past centuries, the predominant architecture in the towers of the valley, with thick walls, great enceintes and small windows.
