

Cambrian Interpretation Center

We would not be what we are now without a series of coincidences called evolution. Neither us nor anything around us.

More than 500 million years ago, in the Paleozoic Era, there was an explosion of life. Beings began to appear, distant in time, but with characteristics similar to those we could find today. This time, so distant, is known as the Cambrian period.

In the territory included in the Town Hall of Los Barrios de Luna, a perfect trace of everything that happened so many millions of years ago has remained visible. Just by taking a walk, attentive eyes will be able to observe vestiges of this primitive life. Very ancient rocks and fossils, such as those of trilobites, which have attracted geologists and paleontologists from all over the world for decades.
