

Petavonium

It is a part of the route across the valleys of Zamora, Vidriales, Orbigo and Eria.

Two watchtowers, one of the gateway and a fence have been rebuilt, allowing the tourist visits to the camp. The strategic interest of Vidriales valley in the wars against the people of Cantabria made that many occupations followed in it.

The oldest remains belong to the ruins of the camp known as Sansueña

At the end of the century I BC, the Legio X Gemina settles building a big rectangular camp of which we hardly know archaeological data .

Museum collection of Roman Camps Petavonium

In the town of Santibáñez de Vidriales, in Zamora, next to the City Hall, an Interpretation Centre of the Roman Camps has been set up. It provides information on the military organization of the Roman military camps by paying special attention to the Petavonium.

They have recreated various military installations in order that we can get an idea of the lifestyle of settled military units in the Roman fort. The military enclosure Petavonium had an extension of 17 Ha, with the presence of five thousand legionaries of Legio X Gemina.
