

Museum Zuloaga de Pedraza

The fortified tower of the Castle of Pedraza holds the Zuloaga museum, set up by the heirs of the painter Ignacio Zuloaga. He acquired, in 1926, the Castle of Pedraza where, after restoring one of the towers installed his studio and painted landscapes and portraits of people of the village.

The museum shows ceramic works, paintings and drawings of Zuloaga, beside paintings of others artists, among them, a Christ by El Greco, a portrait of the countess of Baena made by Goya, and a flamenco still life of the XVII century.

Buildings

Castle of Pedraza: Poligonal ground plan, double enclosure, with coves and square turrets, plus an artificial moat excavated in the rock. The castle uses part of the wall and preserves the remains of one front, with Romanesque elements. The tower that serves as the tower of homage uses a different bonding than the rest of the castle. It used to be owned by the Herrera and the Velasco (Dukes of Frías) families. The sons of the king of France, Francisco I, were kept hostage in this castle.
