

Archaeological Hall of Herrera de Pisuergra

Didactic hall recreating the Roman world, the life in a Roman legion's camp, a ceramics workshop, a coin and bronze workshop... Created with the idea of building awareness of the remains of the Roman camp located in Herrera (once the Roman Pisoraca).

At the entrance to the hall an observation tower from the Roman era has been reconstructed of a height of 8 metres, as a replica of those in the Roman soldier settlements.

Site

Camp Pisoraca

It is a military Roman camp whose remains are dispersed in the urban area of Herrera de Pisuergra. It became an important communication hub in the plateau for going out towards the Cantabrian ports and the transport of slaves and cereals too.

It was an important strategic settlement in the Roman Empire expansion to the North of the ancient Hispania.
