Museum Church of Santiago in Carrión de los Condes

The whole collection, despite being Romanesque from the end of the twelfth century, are not typically static. Particularly noteworthy are the garments of the individual figures with their tiny folds and facial expressions.

Buildings

Church of Santiago: Romanesque facade with a Greek-Roman influence. The frieze of the Cristo de Majestad is surrounded by the Tetramorphous, guarded by the figures of the twelve apostles.There was a fire during the War of Independence. The structure, albeit Romanesque of the late 12th century, is not static; the figures are full of life. Some of the figures are richly dressed and have expressive miens and other very accurate details. It houses the Museo de Arte Sacro.
