

Church of San Juan

Masonry and brick church built on the remains of a romanesque structure. It has apses and a square tower, plus decoration motifs based on arches and rectangular forms.

At the entrance is a pointed round arch, framed by a frieze and two vertical brick lanes. The ashlar and brick apse is mostly Romanesque. It is divided by columns that serve as buttresses, loopholes and zigzagging decorative motifs, plus a line of diamond heads under the roof.
