

Palace of the Dueñas

Square palace with a small tower on one of the corners, built in brick, stone and cob. On the main door is the coat of arms of the beltran family, surrounded by angels and two medallions.

The coffered entrance hall leads to the rectangular, two-storey courtyard, which is one long line of magnificent stonework: graceful capitals, medallions, shields, balustrades...It has a wide cloister-like staircase with huge steps leading up to the first floor.
