

Church of San Nicolas

The ground plan of this 12th-century church is similar to that of the Iglesia de San Pedro de Tejada, although distorted by the substitution of the 15th-century apse and the chapels from the 16th century.

The church has two sections upon a transept, a gable end window, a round dome with corbels and an old north front similar to the Iglesia de San Pedro de Tejada. The base of the font is interesting, and so is the altarpiece of Saint Nicholas, dating from the 16th century.
