

Castle of the Duques de Frías

Dominated by a big rock and by the river Ebro, with a fortified medieval bridge. The castle overlooks the vast valley of Tobalina. It has parted windows and preserves three mullioned windows with Romanesque capitals dating from the 13th century, representing warriors on horseback and fantastic birds.

It consists of a tower of homage and an irregular courtyard, plus a moat and turrets in the corners. After being rebuilt by Alfonso III in the 15th century, it was handed to the Fernández de Velasco family. The castle has round turrets separating the castle from the rest of the wall. The square tower protects one gate, the moat and the barrier.
