Palace of Santa Cruz or Bracamonte

Palace of the Bracamonte belonged to a family of French origin settled in Avila from the repopulation. It was commissioned to build at the beginning of the XVI century and is currently the headquarters of the delegation of culture of the Castilla y Leon. The building, with a square floor, is built with ashlar, masonry, masonry and mud and is a symbiosis of elements of the late Gothic with others from the beginning of the Renaissance.
