

Parish Church Nuestra Señora de la Asuncion (Valdefuentes de Sangusín)

This monumental church began to be built in the XV century and it is all made of granite masonry. Three heights are marked on the outside, and from more to less are the main chapel, the part tangent to it and that of the feet. Both the antepresbyterial section and the main chapel are covered with a complex high-rise star vault and identical design to that of La Fregeneda. This work could be due to the circle of the stonemason Pedro de Ibarra. Outside, the tower stands out above all and the austerity of cleaning volumes stands out, with monumental buttresses.
