

Church of San Miguel de Reoyo

Built in the late 16th century. Outside, there is an outstanding round-arched front flanked by paired columns topped off by a pediment. The three-storey brick tower was reformed in the 18th century.

Inside, there are three naves separated by pillars and round arches and covered by plaster vaults forming diamond points. The transept is covered by a dome resting on scallops showing the coats of arms of the patrons of the church. The high choir was rebuilt in the mid 20th century. On the Gospel side, there is the far end of a Romanesque church of the late 12th century, restored and made into a baptism chapel.
